

Our Approach to Investing in Asia

Active management

We believe many of the region's widely used indices are backward looking and are not representative of the industries and companies that will be successful in the future.

With respect to the region's debt indices, we believe they are representative of the most indebted countries as opposed to the most creditworthy.

Long-term focus on Asia

We believe a long-term approach is the most effective way to capitalize on Asia's evolution.

Matthews Asia has been investing in Asia since 1991 and we draw on our experience to identify companies that stand to benefit from the growth and development of markets throughout the region.

Bottom-up research

We employ a fundamental, bottom-up investment process that seeks to identify companies with sustainable long-term growth prospects, strong business models, quality management teams and reasonable valuations. For debt securities, we look for issuers that demonstrate strength in credit, currencies and interest rates. This research process involves more than 2,500 company meetings each year.

Defining Asia's investment strategies

We strive to provide investors a range of Asia strategies across the risk-reward spectrum and launch new strategies when there are compelling investment opportunities in the region.

Investing in international and emerging markets may involve additional risks, such as social and political instability, market illiquidity, exchange-rate fluctuations, a high level of volatility and limited regulation. In addition, single-country and sector strategies may be subject to a higher degree of market risk than diversified funds because of concentration in a specific industry, sector or geographic location. Investing in small-and mid-size companies is more risky than investing in large companies as they may be more volatile and less liquid than large companies.
